1 Horseshoe Bend
Horseshoe Bend is a breathtaking natural wonder located near Page, Arizona, within the Glen Canyon National Recreation Area. It's a horseshoe-shaped incised meander of the Colorado River, carved out over millions of years. The bend is a stunning example of erosion, with the river winding its way through red-hued sandstone cliffs.

2 Lake Powell
Lake Powell is a large man-made reservoir straddling the Arizona-Utah border in the United States. It's known for its crystal-clear waters, scenic canyons, and unique rock formations, making it a popular destination for boating, swimming, and exploring. The lake is surrounded by Glen Canyon National Recreation Area and offers breathtaking views and recreational activities.

3 Lower Antelope Canyon
Lower Antelope Canyon is a breathtaking slot canyon located near Page, Arizona, known for its stunning red sandstone formations and narrow passageways. This natural wonder is carved by water and wind over millions of years, creating a maze-like structure with unique rock formations and surreal landscapes.
