1 Valley of Fire State Park
Valley of Fire State Park is a stunning 40,000-acre Nevada destination famous for 150-million-year-old bright red Aztec sandstone,ancient petroglyphs, and surreal, Mars-like landscapes. Located an hour north of Las Vegas, it offers, scenic drives, hiking trails (e.g., White Domes), and dramatic, wind-eroded rock formations.

2 Beehive Rock
Beehive rocks are, generally, conical or dome-shaped, naturally occurring geological formations resembling traditional, old-fashioned beehives (skeps). They are primarily formed by intense weathering and erosion of rock, most notably sandstone in Australia's Bungle Bungles or volcanic tuff in Hungary's Bükkalja, often displaying distinct, layered, or ribbed, textured surfaces.

3 Atlatl Rock
Atlatl Rock, located in Nevada's Valley of Fire State Park, is a prominent red Aztec sandstone outcrop famous for 4,000-year-old Native American petroglyphs. A steep metal staircase leads visitors to a panel featuring carvings of atlatls (ancient spear-throwers), human figures, and animals. It is a quick, popular stop with a nearby campground.

4 Valley of Fire Visitor Center,
The new, $30-million Valley of Fire Visitor Center (opened late 2025) is a 16,500-square-foot facility designed to handle high park traffic. Located on Valley of Fire Road, it serves as a central hub for information, featuring a 10-minute orientation film, educational exhibits on geology and history, a gift shop, and restrooms.

5 Rainbow Vista
Rainbow Vista in Nevada's Valley of Fire State Park is a scenic viewpoint and short, sandy hiking trail (approx. 1 mile round trip) known for panoramic, multi-colored Aztec sandstone formations. It showcases vibrant reds, yellows, and pinks, offering a dramatic, elevated view of the desert landscape.

6

Fire Canyon

Fire Canyon, located within Nevada's Valley of Fire State Park, is a stunning, otherworldly landscape defined by vibrant, fiery red Aztec sandstone formations. It features deep, intense, and contrasting colors of crimson, pink, and orange that appear to glow, especially at sunrise and sunset. Visitors can explore it via scenic drives along Fire Canyon Road, panoramic views from the Silica Dome area, or by walking through thick red sand trails, showcasing dramatic desert scenery formed over 150 million years.

7

Seven Wonders Loop Trail at Fire Valley State Park

The Seven Sisters in Nevada are a group of seven towering, red sandstone rock formations located within Valley of Fire State Park, approximately 50 miles northeast of Las Vegas. Known for their iconic, eroded, and accessible design, they are a popular, scenic roadside stop featuring a picnic area and, for many, a unique, picturesque location for weddings and, as shown in this image, romantic elopements.

8

Fire Wave

The Fire Wave is a famous, scenic sandstone formation in Nevada's Valley of Fire State Park characterized by vibrant, swirling stripes of red, pink, and white. Often called "The Bacon," it resembles an ocean wave frozen in stone. Accessible via an easy ~1.5-mile roundtrip hike, it is best viewed in late afternoon.
